S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON

Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so promptly, or so safely as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

IN THINE OWN HEART.

Though Christ a thousand times
In Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee,
Thy soul is still forlorn.
The cross on Golgotha
Will never save thy soul;
The cross in thine own heart,
Alone can make thee whole.

Whate'er thy lovest, man,
That, too, become thou must;
God, if thou lovest God;
Dust, if thou lovest dust.
Go out, God will go in,
Die thou and let him live,
Be not, and he will be;
Wait, and he'll all things give.

To bring thee to thy God
Love takes the shortest route;
The way which knowledge leads
Is but a roundabout.
Drive out from thee the world,
And then like God thou'lt be—
A heaven within thyself
In calm eternity.

Let but thy heart, O man,
Become a valley low,
And God shall rain on it
Till it will overflow.
Oh, shame! The silkworm works
And spins till it can fly,
And thou, my soul, wilt still
On thine old earth clod lie!

Man, if the time on earth
Should seem too long for thee,
Turn thou to God and live,
Time free, eternally.

Angelus Silesius.

SNOWTOP MOUNTAIN.

The sun was setting in a burst of final glory after the sudden shower, touching the raindrops on every leaf and blade of grass into scintillating, iridescent globules of light. His slanting rays falling on Snowtop, its proud head reared far above its sister mountains, lent its cold grandeur an unwonted rosy warmth. In the valley far below, the mists were beginning to rise in vague, uncertain shapes, between which, when parted by the wind, one caught the green gleam of a field in the almost unbroken sterility.

On the outskirts of one of these fertile spots stood a log cabin, a wreath of smoke circling airily from its stone chimney, suggesting, no doubt, a hearty supper to the "men folks" as they trudged wearily in from the field.

Standing on the low roofed porch which faced the "gyarden patch," eagerly awaiting their coming, was a young girl, a half dozen or more lazy dogs grouped fantastically around her.

"Have ye heard the news?" she asked, turning her sparkling eyes on the group as they came up—tall, sunburned, uncouth creatures. They looked up with sudden interest. "News" was to them, in their monotonous, uneventful lives, a thing not to be ignored or despised.

"What air that, Lucindy?" queried her brother Lon.

Her eyes grew brighter; her dimpled face shone with delight at possession of this bit of feminine gossip. "Sophy Taggett war here this afternoon, and she said that Eph Green had told the word down to the settlement that he war a-goin to marry Mandy Fleer up to the meetin house on Saturday night. That's news for ye, now; ain't it?"

She paused to hear their expressions of surprise at this unlooked for happening. "And she ses to me, se' Sophy, 'I saw Elmiry Green as I came up here, and she ses to me, se' she: "If brother Eph air a-goin to get another housekeeper, I leave this house, I do, for I won't play second fiddle to nobody. I 'low that I can find another home pretty speedy."' And you know what that means," added the girl significantly, giving her pert, wrenlike head a toss.

She did not note how Lon's face darkened; how he clutched suddenly at the post against which he was leaning.

"What do ye mean?" drawled her young brother Reub interestedly.

She glanced at him in disdain. "A-la, Reub Taylor! If I war so owl blind as not to see how Luke Cheetum has been traipsin along of Elmiry Green as if he war her own shadder, I'd quit," she asseverated. "She'll marry Luke as sure as—as"—she paused for a fitting simile—"as moonshine."

Lon had taken a step forward, his clinched hands pressed close to his sides. "It's a lie!" he cried, his dark, angry eyes blazing into hers. "Ye have no call to couple her name with his. It's a lie!" he reiterated, his bosom heaving with wrath.

The girl was so startled by this sudden outburst that for a moment she was speechless. Then, quickly regaining her momentarily escaped conversational powers, she cried out angrily: "Did ye ever! Be ye turned a stark, starin idjit, Lon? To hear ye a-jawin there folks'd feel obligated to think ye loved the girl yerself."

"And if I did or not," he responded, scowling at her from under his knitted brows, "ye had no call to speak their two names together as brash as if they war already mated."

"Oh, hesh up," harshly admonished their father. "There's many as well favored a girl as Elmiry Green in these hyar mountings, to my thinkin, and for why ye go ravin and rantin around about her I can't see."

Suddenly round the corner of the house dashed one of the many dogs belonging to the place bearing a bone in his mouth, another dog in close pursuit. Reub, who, with legs apart, stood gazing dreamily into space, was directly in their path. The fleeing animal, turning his head as he ran to look at his pursuer, ran full into the boy, sending him sprawling to the ground. The fair Lucinda became convulsed with laughter. She sank back upon a bench which stood on the porch, completely overcome, while Reub picked himself ruefully from the ground with many a sheepish glance about him.

"Mercy sakes! Do quit your noise and come in; the supper air a-spilin on the table," came in querulous tones from inside the cabin, followed by the speaker herself. Grandmam Taylor pointed through the open door with wrathful mien. "For the land of love," she cried, "if ever I see sich folks! Go in, all of ye."

The men shuffled stolidly in and seated themselves, their habitually grave faces as impressive as though nothing of a disturbing nature had occurred, but during the meal the less staid Lucinda now and then broke into an explosive fit of mirth at remembrance of Reub's ludicrous downfall.

But though Lon had outwardly checked the anger which had so startled his hearers his bosom was rent with a storm so fierce that, as he ate, it threatened every moment to choke him. He loved Elmira Green with all the strength of his being, and the mere thought of losing her awakened in him feelings which he himself had not dreamed of possessing. He had been blind, he told himself. A wealth of incident, unmarked at the time, flooded his brain, and he saw now that though he had taken for granted Elmira's reciprocation of his love there was in reality no such feeling in her bosom.

Faintly through the distance there came to him a whippoorwill's mournful call, and its sadness seemed a fit echo to the sorrow in his rudely awakened heart.

Night was fast falling over the valley.

The opalescent gleaming mists advanced and fell back with the wind, now swirling downward, now rising in eddying columns up the rugged bluffs. Myriads of insects were screeching, croaking, scraping, on every bush and tree.

The mellow tones of a cow bell were heard far up the mist dimmed mountain path, growing momentarily more distinct. Presently a cow came shambling along the uneven way, followed by a rosy cheeked, handsome girl. She was humming a blithe little song, its measures timed to the pokes which she was forced to give with her stick to the loitering cow, which paused every moment to take a surreptitious nibble at some unusually tempting bit of herbage.

Suddenly the song broke off. A man had risen from the deep shadow of a rock and confronted the singer. A half uttered scream escaped her lips. "A-la, Lon Taylor," she gasped in soft, contralto tones. How ye scairt me! I thought it war a ghost." She was laughing now and looking at him with swimming, long lashed brown eyes.

"Ye ain't afraid of ghosts, air ye, Elmiry?" he asked.

"At this time of day ye can't tell what ye'll see," she replied, nodding her brown head sagely. "Just look at that," with a quick change of tone as the cow, which, taking advantage of this brief respite from the proddings of her enemy the stick, had been blissfully grazing, shied suddenly and fled precipitately down the path. "I must be after her."

He laid a detaining hand on her arm. "Let the cow critter be; she'll find her way home. I want to talk with ye, Elmiry," he said, meeting her startled glance with beseeching gaze. "Let's go back the way ye came; it's pleasant there."

"I'm afraid," she demurred, with a little shudder. "It's so dark and lonesome."

"There won't nothin hurt ye," he responded. "Athout it's some of them ghosts ye know so much about," childingly. "Come along."

She complied with a coquettish toss of her head, and soon they were trudging far up the mountain, engaged in rustic badinage.

Up and on they went, and so engrossed was she in what they were saying that she scarcely noticed whither their steps were tending.

Suddenly she paused with a frightened glance around. "Lon Taylor," she cried out shrilly, "whar have ye took me to? We air on Spirit rock!"

Fearful indeed was the spot she found herself upon. From the narrow ledge on which they stood the mountain descended in a sheer, unbroken fall. Far, far below, in the dim, peaceful valley, great cruel rocks gleamed whitely.

A sudden wind sprang up; so fierce it seemed to the shrinking, terrified girl that she fell on her knees, clutching frantically the cold, unyielding rocks at her feet.

"Oh, take me back," she implored him at last when her first fright had passed.

"Ye can't go back, Elmiry," he answered, and his voice was so changed that she looked at him in quick alarm. "Ye can't take a step forward nor back." His tones were full of resolve. There was now no beseeching look in his eyes, for a fierce glow was in them. He stood regarding her, his arms folded across his breast.

"What do ye mean?" she faltered.

"I mean that we must have an understanding right here and now," he replied. "Tell me, air ye a-goin to marry Luke Cheetum? I ain't loved ye for nothin, girl, and I give ye right here to choose between us. If ye won't marry me, ye shan't him, for I'll fling ye down the bluffs first." His voice was hoarse with feeling when he said this, and his eyes never left the startled beauty of the girl's face. "Just say ye'll marry me stid er him, and I'll take ye back athout another word. Look down," he added, "and mark what's before ye and remember ye hold yer life in yer own hands tonight, Elmiry."

She dared not turn her eyes on the fascinating dimness of the valley beneath, lest, impelled by the awful grandeur of the scene, she should lose her senses and be drawn down to certain death.

She was at his mercy, for he completely barred the path by which they had come, and escape by any other means seemed impossible.

Suddenly she sprang to her feet, unmindful of her proximity to that awful chasm. "Ye coward," she cried out disdainfully, a vivid spot of color on either cheek, "to threaten a girl like that! Let me back!" Her thick, glossy brown hair had escaped its fastenings and swirled around her in the wind. One round arm, from which the sleeve had fallen back as she steadied herself against a wall of rock, shone against its background like Parian marble. She looked like an outraged goddess of the mountains, whose wrath had been kindled by the folly of some weak mortal.

"Don't fool with me," he said scowlingly. "Once for all ye must make up yer mind." He had taken a step nearer, and the blaze of their eyes met in a flash like lightning. A stone loosened by his foot rolled and fell from the ledge. He seized her wrist. "Listen," he cried. They held their breaths. At last, far, far below, it struck the rocks, the echo of its fall ringing back and forth.

She was white and trembling now, words of entreaty falling from her lips. Then, with the energy of despair, snatching her wrist from his grasp: "Let me be," she cried. "I won't give Luke Cheetum up!" She turned as though to flee. To her right stood Lon, a picture of fury; to the left—she caught her breath with a little gasp of hope—was a wide fissure in the rock on which they stood; safe on the other side she could defy him. Could she reach it? she asked herself. A leap one hairbreadth too short meant certain death on the rocks below; yet, on the other hand, what more dare she hope to receive at the hands of the man at her side?

Like a flash she turned and sped along the narrow ledge; one quick spring, and she had cleared the yawning space.—St. Louis Republic.

Getting Out of a Dilemma.

Mildred Aldrich tells of a very clever way in which two well known literary women of Boston escaped from a dilemma. It was in Boston's best known if not only literary salon. The hostess approached a dear friend and amusedly whispered in her ear: "My dear Lillian, I am in a dreadful dilemma. There is a woman here with whose face I have some special association, and yet I cannot call her name or where I met her. I am possessed with an idea that I especially invited her. I am going to introduce you to her, and you must find out her name." The hostess and her friend approached the guest. The hostess said in her nicest way, addressing the stranger, "I want you to know my dear friend, Miss ——," and turned and left them.

The two women chatted a few moments, and when the hostess again approached them the friend addressed her over her shoulder with, "I am going to take"— Then she hesitated, looked perplexed and said to the guest: "Will you forgive me? I did not quite catch your name." Of course the guest supplied the missing name, and the friend continued to the hostess, "I am going to take Mrs. —— in to get a cup of tea." "Yes, do, Lillian," said the hostess, and the two women exchanged gratified and relieved smiles.

Utilizing Small Streams.

Where coal is dear, as in many small towns, there is a prospect that light, heat and power will be cheap. The neglected streams that were thought of little consequence have already assumed such importance as they never had before. As long as electrical energy was generated from coal they seemed to be a great hindrance to its universal use, but if every little mountain stream is to be utilized, then, next to good coal mines, the streams will become of the greatest importance. What was hardly more than an experiment three years ago has been carried to such practical success that electricians are now saying, "Give us a good mountain stream, and we will insure cheap lights and power, and even heat, without the use of a pound of fuel."—Exchange.

SACRAMENTO VS. SAN JOSE.

The proposed removal of the State Capital from Sacramento to San Jose has been the all-absorbing topic since the Legislature, by an overwhelming majority, decided to submit the proposition to the people. Although Sacramento is badly scared by the action taken by the Legislature we really can see no cause for alarm on the part of those who have property interests in that town. It is one thing for the Legislature to favor the removal, but quite another thing when it comes to the people's say in the matter. If there is any great expense to tax-payers attached to the removal it is pretty safe to assume that the proposition will be voted down. If, however, San Jose should put up sufficient money to cover all the expenses of the change it would behoove Sacramento to get a move on, as the cost of the removal is about the only objection voters outside of that city would have to setting up the State Government in San Jose. In that case the former would have to appeal to the sympathies of the State, which we fear are not with her, if we are to take the recent action of her Legislative representatives as an index.

However, it is quite improbable that the "Garden City" would be willing to put up four or five million dollars to secure the prize, which it is estimated would be about the cost of a change in the location of the States' capitol. This being so we can see no reason why the people of Sacramento should be frightened out of their boots. One million dollars and ten acres of land will never do the business. Taxes, the people say are already too high.

FRIDAY, March 10th.

The Board met at 9 A. M. The first business was the consideration of the bill of Jacob Joost as ex-officio road master of Ocean road district for the sum of $89.20, which was allowed.

An order was made requiring that each Justice of the Peace of the various townships in Sonoma county collect all ballot booths and boxes in their respective townships, store the same, make an inventory and at their earliest convenience report the same to the clerk of the Board.

The following resolution was passed in regard to the failure of Edward Lord to remove an obstruction on the road leading from San Luis to Lower Landing.

WHEREAS, Edward Lord, of Sonoma road district of this county, has erected and maintains an encroachment and obstruction, to wit: A gate in and upon the public highway leading from San Luis to Lower Landing on the bank of Sonoma creek, and having been duly served with a notice by the road commissioner to remove said obstruction which Lord refuses to do, it is ordered that the road commissioner institute action in the proper court to abate the nuisance and receive $10 for each and every day said nuisance remained after the giving of said notice.

The Board then adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

SATURDAY, March 11th.

The Board met at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. The first business was the consideration of the petition of the Central Street Railway Company for authority to lay tracks and maintain a street railway. The hearing of the petition was set for April 6th at 1:30 o'clock.

On motion of Supervisor Hall the following was submitted and set for hearing for the 6th of April at 3 P. M:

WHEREAS, the City of Santa Rosa contemplates the acquisition, construction and completion of a system of water-works, including necessary water rights, rights of way, etc., now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in case the proposition to acquire such improvements should be approved at an election to be held for that purpose, that said city and its duly authorized agents are hereby granted the right and privilege, to lay and maintain pipes for said water works along the public highways of Sonoma county, and to dig ditches for that said purpose, whereever may by said city be deemed necessary. Provided, however, that the roads shall be placed in as good condition as before the breaking thereof and that no trenches shall be maintained so as to interfere with public travel and that danger signals shall be erected while said work is being done.

The Board then adjourned until March 20th.

New Game Law.

The Emeric game bill with most of the objectionable features eliminated has passed both Houses and has been signed by the Governor. The important features of the bill are as follows:

"It shall be unlawful in this State, between March 1st and September 1st to hunt, kill destroy or have in possession, dead or alive, except for the purpose of propagation, any quail, partridge, grouse or any kind of wild duck, snipe or rail."

The dove shooting season is closed between March 1st, and August 1st.

The old law which has protected deer, elk, antelope, mountain sheep, etc., at all seasons has been amended so as to read:

"Every person who, in the State of California, shall within the two years next, except between September 1st and October 15th in each year, after the passage of this act hunt, pursue, take, kill or destroy any male deer, elk, antelope, mountain sheep or buck, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

The law in reference to green hides, skins, etc., is the same as of old, with the exception of the cold storage, which reads:

"Every cold-storage company, person keeping a cold storage warehouse, tavern, or hotel keeper, restaurant or eating-house keeper, marketman or other person who shall sell, expose or offer for sale, or give away or have in his possession in this State any deer, quail, bobwhite, partridge, pheasant, grouse, dove or wild duck during the time it shall be unlawful to kill such animal or bird, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

This is an excellent measure, as it will stop the sale of the game above mentioned in restaurants, hotels, etc., during a season when it will be unlawful to kill the game.

According to the old law game can be sold in restaurants, etc., under the old pretext of cold-storage and as a consequence the Game Commissioners have been powerless to secure conviction.

The law in reference to deer further states that every person in this State who at any time shall sell or offer for sale the hide or meat of any deer, elk, antelope or mountain sheep shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Thus it will be seen that our large game, notwithstanding the few weeks of an open season, will be well protected by the provisions of the new game bill as it passed the Senate.

The killing of pheasants is prohibited in this State for two years after the passage of the bill.

Market hunters and those who have made the slaughter of wild game a business will be interested in this section of the new game bill:

"Every person who shall use a shotgun of a larger caliber than that commonly known and designated as number 10-gauge for the purpose of killing or destroying any wild duck, rail, quail, partridge, pheasant or grouse, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

Now then comes the amendment to the Emeric bill which caused the great disturbance. It is in reference to uninclosed and inclosed lands. The Emeric bill in its original form read that any person entering upon any ground whether inclosed or uninclosed that was properly posted with trespass notices, without having had the permission of the owner or lessee, was guilty of a misdemeanor, etc.

This has been changed so as to read:

"Every person who, upon any inclosed or cultivated grounds which are private property, and where signs are displayed forbidding such shooting, shall shoot any quail, bobwhite, pheasant, patridge, grouse, dove or wild duck, without permission first obtained from the owner or person in possession of such grounds, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

The gun tax mentioned in the Emeric bill has been shot to pieces. The friends of the bill generally expect that the Governor will approve it.

RICHARD S. HEATH, a son of the late General Heath, of 1512 Taylor street, San Francisco, and Frederick W. Polley, a Canadian, were arrested last Tuesday on warrants charging them with the murder of Louis B. McWhirter, in Fresno, on August 29th last.

Nature's Surest Ally.

If nature did not struggle against disease, even in weakly constitutions swift indeed would be the course of a malady to its fatal termination. While nature thus struggles let us, lest worse befall us, aid her efforts with judicious medicinal help. Experience must be our guide in battles with disease, and that "lamp to our feet" indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe, tried and thorough ally of nature. If the blood be infected with bile, if the bowels and stomach are inactive, if the kidneys fail to expel impurities of which they are the natural outlet, a course of the Bitters is the surest reliance of the sufferer, one, moreover, that is sanctioned by professional indorsement and use for nearly half a century. No American or foreign remedy has earned greater distinction as a remedy for and preventive of chronic liver complaint, malaria, constipation, kidney and rheumatic affection and debility.

Gentlemen: I take pleasure in informing you of the very beneficial results which have followed the use of DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE in the case of myself and wife. For a year I was subject to a distressing pain at the base of the brain and upper portion of the spinal cord. I lost flesh and was greatly troubled with sleeplessness. Your Nervine was highly recommended to me. My case had been so obstinate that I had no confidence in the efficacy of any medicine. Yet as a last resort I consented to give it a trial. Much to my surprise, I experienced marked benefit; my sleeplessness disappeared, my headache was removed; my spirits and general health greatly improved. I SOON GAINED TWENTY POUNDS. ALL THIS OCCURRED AFTER LEARNED AND WELL KNOWN PHYSICIANS HAD FAILED. My wife is taking the Nervine with the best of results. LOUIS D. VANDERVERE.

It has rained every day the present week and as a result all outdoor occupations are at a standstill. So far this season Sonoma Valley has had a surfeit of the pluvial element and the steady rainfall the past six days has disgusted our farmers, who have not yet finished plowing and pruning their orchards.

Prof. Crawford of Santa Rosa has presented his solar telescope to the High School of the above city. It is a six-inch refractor, says the Santa Rosa "Republican," and so powerful as readily to reveal the moons of Jupiter, the rings of Saturn and the hills and valleys of the moon. It will also show stellar bodies so far distant that the time of passage of light from them to us requires over one thousand years.

J. M. Roney, the liquor merchant of Santa Rosa and one of the early pioneers, died at his home in that city last Sunday, aged sixty years. He was a native of Youngville, Warren county, Penn., came to California in its early days and has been prominently identified with Sonoma county interests for the past thirty years. He was a member of Blue Lodge Commandery and Chapter of Masonic order, A. O. U. W. and was an exempt fireman.

Edward Lord of Embarcadero has been sued by Sonoma county for obstructing a public highway. The suit is the outcome of a controversary between Mr. Lord and Road Commissioner Thompson, who represents Sonoma county, as to the ownership of the road leading to Sonoma Landing, which passes over the lands of the former, and which the county claims is a public highway, but which Mr. Lord is equally positive is a private road. In bringing the suit against defend-

Our Jimmy Sims seems to be "in it" at Sacramento, says the Santa Rosa correspondent of the Petaluma "Imprint." He made a strong and eloquent fight against the womans' suffrage bill and also opposed, with equal success, the bill pensioning school teachers. But that is not all. His critics pay a high compliment to his English and his oratorical powers. Jimmy is a great admirer of the ladies, God bless them, but the honesty of his convictions induced him to take a strong stand against their voting privileges. If it were a question of tariff on waist pressing, now, Jimmy's vote, I vow, would have been recorded on the other side.

BOGGS CARRIGER.

Judge Dougherty Grants Him a New Trial.

Boggs Carriger, who was convicted of murder in the second degree in the Superior Court at Santa Rosa, a few weeks ago, was granted a new trial by Judge Dougherty last Monday. The defendant, it will be remembered, shot and killed his brother William Carriger last Summer. Ever since the tragedy Boggs has stoutly maintained that the shooting was accidental, but for all that the prosecution succeeded in securing a conviction, which verdict has been set aside by Judge Dougherty on the grounds of an error in instructing the jury, which was purely an inadvertance.

Following is the decision in full:

"The defendant moves this court for a new trial. He claims that the verdict of the jury should be set aside and a new trial granted. First, because improper testimony was admitted and proper testimony excluded at the trial. This ground was not seriously urged upon the argument, and I am satisfied no error appears in this assignment. Second, that the evidence was insufficient to warrant the verdict of murder in the second degree. Upon this point I can simply say that if the jury had found a more severe verdict I should not set it aside, because the evidence did not warrant it. There was ample evidence to justify a verdict of murder in the first or second degree, and the discretion and finding of the jury should not be disturbed upon this ground. Third, it is admitted that the jury were correctly instructed some twenty times that they could not find the defendant guilty unless they were satisfied from the evidence of his guilt, to a moral certainty and beyond a reasonable doubt; and if they entertained any doubt as to whether the shot was fired accidentally they should give him the benefit of the doubt and acquit him. But among the fifty instructions offered and given appears the following one:

"Intent or intention is manifest by the circumstances connected with the offence and the sound mind and discretion of the accused.

"The intent must be proved, but when an unlawful act is proved, the law presumes it to have been intended, unless otherwise shown by the evidence. It is never required by the prosecution to prove an unlawful intent by positive and direct evidence."

"In many cases such proof could not be made, and it is deemed sufficient to prove the unlawful act, and from such proof the law presumes the unlawful intent. And if the defendant in this case fired a loaded pistol at the deceased and killed him the law presumes the defendant intended to kill the deceased, and unless it is shown by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that his intention was other than his acts indicated, the law will not hold him guiltless."

"The words 'beyond a reasonable doubt,' near the end of this instruction, are directly opposed and inconsistant with the other instructions correctly stating the law upon this point.

"The defendant is not called upon to rebut the presumption that he intended the natural consequence of his shooting beyond a reasonable doubt. He should be acquitted if he created by his testimony a reasonable doubt. This instruction is diametrically opposed to the general and correct tenor of the charge. It was pure inadvertance and no doubt was unnoticed by the jury and took no part in controlling their action. But this cannot be assumed with safety as a legal proposition. After a close examination of the cases that have undergone examination by our Supreme Court upon this question I am satisfied that if this motion for a new trial is denied and an appeal is taken that the Supreme Court would grant a new trial because of the error in the above instruction. Believing so, it is my duty to grant it him. Refusing it would lead to the consumption of a year or more of time during which witnesses are liable to leave the state or die, and the people's cause defeated. In the furtherance of justice a new trial is ordered soley upon the ground of the error in the instruction pointed out. The case is peremptorily set for trial for the 18th day of April, 1893. It is so ordered.

S. K. DOUGHERTY, Judge.

DE BOIS STILL ALIVE.

With a Bullet in His Brain He Still Continues to Linger On.

Alfred DeBois, the young man who accidentally shot himself in the head at the Mervyn Hotel, Glen Ellen, over a month ago, was taken to the County Hospital last Tuesday, as that town has no resident physician. Ever since the unfortunate occurrence the injured man has complained of excrutiating pains behind the right ear, where it is supposed the ball lodged after penetrating the skull near the center of the forehead. A few days after receiving the wound an offensive discharge of pus commenced to flow from the right ear and later on from the bullet hole in the forehead.

On Sunday last De Bois complained that his lower extremities and a portion of his head were freezing cold, and it is doubtful if he will recover. He is gradually losing flesh and at latest accounts was very much emaciated.

The case of this young man is an interesting one from a medical standpoint as similar wounds usually prove instantly fatal.

Proceedings to Perpetuate Testimony.

Dr. N. G. W. Greenberg, through his attorney, J. P. Rodgers, has brought suit against the City of Sonoma to compel the corporation to correct two mistakes in a former deed made by Alcalde Wm. Fuller to George Pearce in 1850, for out lot No. 546, known as the Losee place, recently purchased by the plaintiff. The papers were served on the President of the Board of City Trustees, Henry Weyl, last Monday.

At a special meeting held by the Trustees last Thursday it was made an order of the Board that Clerk Breitenbach draw up an answer to the complaint stating therein that the present City of Sonoma has no jurisdiction over the lot in question and disclaiming any and all interests in the above estate, as the Losee place is located outside the incorporated limits of the town.

This suit is brought to obtain judgment to correct two mistakes made by Wm. Fuller, Alcalde of Sonoma in 1850, in conveying the Losee property to George Pearce. One of the mistakes was in the spelling of Pearce, which was in correctly spelled "Pierce," and the other in stating the number of the lot to be 146, whereas it should have been 546.

Property Going Down at El Verano.

On Friday evening of last week, during the heavy wind and rain storm which prevailed throughout the night, an attractive two-story residence in El Verano belonging to the Improvement Company, was blown down and completely wrecked. An artistically built chicken house recently built by John W. Worrell, situated in the western part of that amusing city, also succumbed to the gale. The loss will amount to between $1200 and $1500.

Those Cutting Scrape Cases.

The trial of the alleged participants in the Italian cutting scrape, which occurred in this place on last Christmas night, will commence before Judge Dougherty on Thursday, March 23rd. The accused, Pietro Ubaldi, Felicci Clerite and C. Galli will be represented by able counsel. The prosecution will be conducted by District Attorney Seawell.

Deputy Sheriff Sparks has subpœnaed between fifty and sixty witnesses who will testify for and against the accused. The cost of these cases will entail a heavy expense on the county.

A Rare Bird.

On a recent hunting trip in the Sonoma marshes George Twitchel of San Francisco killed a very peculiar looking snipe and unlike any he had ever seen before. He took the bird to Walter Bryant, naturalist of the Academy of Science who pronounced it a native of Alaska. It is a migratory bird but is the only specimen ever secured on this coast. Prof. Bryant has had the bird stuffed and mounted and considers it one of the rarest specimens of the feathered tribe among the Academy's extensive collection.

Didn't Like the Weapons.

"I came very near having a duel once," said the congressman to a group of auditors.

"Tell us about it," said they as one man.

"When I was about thirty," he continued, "I hung out my shingle in a small town in a southern state, and being from the north I did not receive at first the agreeable recognition I expected. In fact there was one Blatherskite of a fellow who made himself so obnoxious that one day I slapped his jaws. This brought all the respectable people of the community over to my side, and I was feeling pretty good for three or four days, when the bottom was knocked out of it all by my receiving a challenge from Mr. Blatherskite. If there was anything more than another that I didn't want to do it was to fight a duel, and I tried to get out of it some way, but couldn't, and finally accepted his challenge and chose doubled barreled shotguns at ten paces. I didn't hear anything from my man for twenty-four hours, and then I had a personal call from him.

"'I have come in,' he said after a few preliminary remarks, 'to make a statement about this duel. What I've got to say is that shotguns are too doggoned mortuary for me, and if you have no objections I'll apologize and call it square.'

"Then I became very brave and blustered some, but I accepted the situation very gracefully at last, and ever after Mr. Blatherskite was most respectful, and stood about as well in the town as he ever did."—Detroit Free Press.

Why Milk Differs in Quality.

Milk is more susceptible to changes from the normal condition than any other food product. The first class of changes has been brought about by the action of breeders. By many years of attention to breeding for fat production, it is now possible to get milk which may be twice as rich as the normal. On the other hand, other breeders have paid especial attention to production of large quantity, even at the expense of quality, until pure milk is sometimes produced having as low as 10 per cent. of solids, when the normal is 13 per cent.

A second set of causes which influence the quality of milk grows out of the ignorance or carelessness of the producer or seller. Where the persons held the exploded idea of the value of one cow's milk for children anything in the treatment of the cow which affects its nervous temperament may unfit it for food for very young children. Uncleanliness or neglect is often a grave source of trouble in the handling of milk, not only on account of the possibilities of the addition of visible filth, but because milk is peculiarly susceptible to odor, various kinds of bacteria and disease germs. Epidemics of scarlet fever and typhoid fever have been traceable to the milk supply, unclean cans and other utensils, and particularly to propagating bacteria. —Boston Transcript.

The Vanishing Couple.

A fashion safe to stamp a young girl in general society as but ill equipped with knowledge of good form is that of "vanishing" in company with her attendant after a dance and remaining in unfrequented corners until remark is thereby created. Such is the young woman whose chaperon is in continual speculation as to her whereabouts or else in active exercise to find her. She is no doubt often innocent of intention to offend, but at large and mixed entertainments the better part of wisdom in a woman is to keep in view of her fellows.

A witty Frenchwoman, Mme. de Girardin, once wrote: "Amuse yourselves, O young beauties, but flutter your wings in the broad light of day. Avoid shadows in which suspicion hides." The "vanishing woman" act should be limited in performance to a platform in full view of the audience. The prompt return of a young woman to the side or vicinity of her chaperon after dancing is not only a graceful and well bred action, but affords an opportunity to the man, who too often is embarrassed in this respect, to withdraw and fulfill some other engagement.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Monday and Friday.

Those of us who like Friday for various reasons, but chiefly because it leads up to Saturday, upon which day schools are closed, will be pleased to hear that it is not half so unlucky a day as Monday, the day school opens again. A German statistician, feeling that Friday had been a much maligned day, determined to make a scientific investigation of the matter, and found that it is not Friday but Monday that is the most unfortunate of the week days.

According to his investigations 16.74 per cent. of all accidents occur on Monday, 15.51 per cent. on Tuesday, 16.31 per cent. on Wednesday, 15.47 per cent. on Thursday, 16.38 per cent. on Friday, 16.38 per cent. on Saturday and only 2.60 per cent. on Sunday. So you see Friday isn't so bad a day after all.—Harper's Young People.

Raphael's Theological Virtue.

It is vain to accuse Raphael, as did certain of his contemporaries, of not having sufficient theological virtue, inasmuch as he painted virgins that were too humanly adorable. Raphael conformed his painting to his ideas and his sentiments. He expressed his soul, just as Lippo Lippi, Botticelli, Mantegna, Bellini and Perugino expressed their souls, each one differently, and in a manner characteristic of his more or less complex personality; and, as regards each one of them, the degree of our admiration and sympathy depends upon the temperament and culture of our own souls.—Theodore Child in Harper's.

A Father's Suggestion.

Jack—I hope you'll consent to a marriage between myself and your daughter Alice.

Quiverfull—Can't do it, young man—weddings are too confoundedly expensive. No, sir, I refuse my consent, but of course—er—if you and Alice should take it into your heads to elope——.

LOVE AND WEATHER.

When, in the budding of the year,
To her of love I chanced to sigh,
"'Tis spring," she whisper'd in my ear;
"You'll feel much better by and by."

And when, in summer's golden hours,
I said my heart was all aglow,
She smiled as sweetly as the flow'rs
And murmured, "Summer, don't you know."

And later, when the leaves fell down,
And I rehearsed my heartfelt tale,
She said, but with a little frown,
"The day is dull, and you are pale."

I sadly waited. Christmas came,
And with the bells my love I told.
Said she, "This wintry night's to blame;
I'm sure you're suffering from the cold."

Oh, grant, ye powers of destiny,
That she and I may meet together,
In some strange land that's fair to see,
But wholly destitute of weather!

—A. C. Gahan in New York Sun.

Absence of Real Children in Literature.

The wise mentors in conventional literature virtually tell you that child literature wants no real children in it: that the real child's example of defective grammar and lack of elegant deportment would furnish to its little patrician patrons suggestions very hurtful indeed to their higher morals, tendencies and ambitions. Then, although the general public couldn't for the life of it see why or how, and might even be reminded that it was just such a rowdying child itself, and that its father—the father of his country—was just such a child, that Abraham Lincoln was just such a lovable, lawless child, all—all of this argument would avail not in the least, since the elegantly minded purveyors of child literature cannot possibly tolerate the presence of any but the refined children—the very proper children—the studiously thoughtful, poetic children—and these must be kept safe from the contaminating touch of our rough and tumble little fellows in "hodden gray," with frowzy heads, begrimed but laughing faces, and such awful, awful vulgarities of naturalness, and crimes of simplicity, and brazen faith and trust, and love of life and everybody in it.—James W. Riley in Forum.

Two Kinds of Pears.

It is remarkable that although new fruits come to the front every year there is not a pear yet that has been able to take the place of the Bartlett or the Seckel. The Bartlett is a European sort, originating in England and named there William's Bon Curetien. It was introduced into this country, and its name getting lost it was named Bartlett, after the man in whose garden it was when its excellent qualities were discovered. The Seckel is a native, a chance seedling found growing near the Schuylkill river, Philadelphia, and the original tree still stands and bears fruit.

The Bartlett is in season throughout September, the Seckel from the close of September and through October. These two kinds are no exception to the rule that the quality of all pears increases in value as the trees get older. The fruit from a full grown Seckel pear tree, for instance, is far superior to that from a tree fruiting for the first time.—Practical Farmer.

A Small Legal Fee.

The smallest fee ever taken by an English counsel was sixpence, that fee having on one occasion been taken by the late Sir John Holker. Barristers' fees were in olden times much less than those now paid. An entry occurs in the church wardens' accounts of St. Margaret's, Westminster, for 1476, showing that a fee of three shillings and eightpence, with fourpence for his dinner, was paid to Robert Fylpott, counsel learned in the law, for his advice.

In Nare's "Glossary," a barrister's fee was stated to be an angel, or ten shillings. These are somewhat different figures to the 600 guineas paid to Sir Charles Russell three or four years ago at the Leeds assizes for less than three hours's work, or at the rate of over three guineas a minute.—London Tit-Bits.

Remarkable Unanimity.

The remarkable unanimity that is so pleasant to observe between man and wife is nicely illustrated by the following two letters of the same date:

COUNTRY, Aug. 20.

DEAR JOHN—I am going to stay another week. Am having a splendid time. Affectionately, JULIA.

CITY, Aug. 20.

DEAR JULIA—You can stay another week. Am having a splendid time. Affectionately, JOHN.

For some reason or other she concludes to pack up and start for home immediately to see about his "splendid time." —Exchange.

Best Flowers for a Sickroom.

The best flowers for a sickroom are growing flowers, but cut flowers are more often obtainable. As to these latter they should first of all be fresh. They quickly decay, and then they communicate to the water in which they are placed vegetable juices which undergo putrefactive fermentation and render the air impure. Bright colored flowers are desirable.—Boston Globe.

"August Flower"

Dyspepsia. There is a gentleman at Malden-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., named Captain A. G. Pareis, who has written us a letter in which it is evident that he has made up his mind concerning some things, and this is what he says:

"I have used your preparation called August Flower in my family for seven or eight years. It is constantly in my house, and we consider it the best remedy for Indigestion, and Constipation we Indigestion. have ever used or known. My wife is troubled with Dyspepsia, and at times suffers very much after eating. The August Flower, however, relieves the difficulty. My wife frequently says to me when I am going to town, 'We are out Constipation of August Flower, and I think you had better get another bottle.' I am also troubled with Indigestion, and whenever I am, I take one or two teaspoonfuls before eating, for a day or two, and all trouble is removed." 9

ALAMOSA, COL., Jan., 60. 1891

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would set violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments which myself and wife gladly testify. It truly had the desired effect. D. S. M'GILLIS.

Mrs. Ester Devilbiss, 351 S. Tenth street, San Jose, Cal., writes, October 1891: Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has indeed done wonders in my part of the country. There has been bought in my neighborhood over $5 worth.

We sincerely warn book canvassers and the public against allowing themselves to be led astray and cheated by any of the "catch-penny" so-called "biographies" of the great Statesman which will be thrown on the market within a very short time, and which consist of nothing but a collection of old and unreliable newspaper clippings. Don't be carried away by any flaring and attractive circulars that you may receive relating to any such books, because what you want is on the life of the illustrious Statesman.

AGENTS wanted all over this State. Steady workers can make sure of earning $100 a week for the next three months. Send at once for special circulars and further particulars [or send $1.00 for outfit] to the
